PLAN TO COMBINE SCHOOL AND THEATER Perkins and Giovannitti

Bureau of Education Will Send Cardboard Models of Buildings to Rural Districts to Show How Idea May Be Practically Worked Out.

An entirely new idea is schoolhouse-building is being developed by the gov-ernment Bureau of Education. It is to combine the rural schoolhouse with an open-air theater, for plays, for school intertainments, and outdoor exhibitions, and for the uses of the local commu-sity.

openair timests, and outdoor exhibitions, and for the uses of the local community.

To show how this may be done, card-board models of such a schoolhouse have been made. Being collapsible, they will been made. Being collapsible, they will be sent, packed fist, to local school authorities anywhere in the They are carefully made 'to scale and are complete in every detail, so that any fairly skilled in the parts—a twin building, in fact, each of the two sections containing two class-rooms. Helween them is a pergola fintended to be covered with vines), and in the rear a sort of court which is meant to serve as a stage. The court is to be planted with shrubs to make a background for the stage, and in the center of the pergola there may be a fountain. This style of schoolnouse is especially adapted for the South and Southwest, where during much of the school year the weather outdoors is pleasant. Undersuch conditions the open-air theater and large rooms connected with it offer a delightful opportunity for promoting social functions of various kinds. In the rear of the court is shown, in the model, a series of benches for spectators. But it is recommended as more desirable to erect the schoolhouse near a suttable slope, and to make an excavation into the hillside in the form of a semi-circle. Within this excavation the seats, of cement or wood, may be built, and, with shrubs and trees planted around about, the general effect cannot be otherwise than attractive and beautiful.

treining. In that archipelago manufacturing of various kinds-such as hat reading, mut making, basket making, and lace making-is carried on mainly at home. These and other household industries are of such great economic importance that utmost efforts are being made to encourage them by teaching in the schools the arts on which they depend. During the last year 216,000 boys and 15,000 girls received requiar daily instruction in profitable industrial lines. Hat making alone engaged the attention of 20,000 boys.

System is Practical.

The system adopted is exoseedingly practical. Expert workers are employed as teachers of the schools—late, popular as teachers of the schools—hate, positions, which is the color, which making of the monoideries, or what hold and the solution of 20,000 boys.

Cross Swords at Sagamore

If the social poulsems of America we rever to be solved it will be in the spirit of the Sagamore Societogical Conference, which has just closed its seventh annual meeting at Sagamore Seach, Mass.

It is the get-together idea that solves our problems, it is the get-together idea that solves our problems, it is the get-together idea that solves that has made the Sagamore conference that appended success. It has become, it is a hopeful sign of our times that so many people of such widely divergent views assemble and in good spirit drucus the conditions and theories that tend to drive them apart or tend to draw them together.

Walle the conference stands for first-hand facts. Societo-face and beart-to-hand facts face-to-face and beart-to-hand facts coved that mikes down the first or coved that mikes down to it in the solution of the coved that mikes down to it in the solution of the coved that mikes down to it in this crowd. There is sorting like it in all America.

senting water unterest thought and some quite hostile to each other in their purposes and methods if seeking to serve humanity. It is pecasible to serve humanity. It is pecasible to get them together in delightfut, friendly fellowship, to round them up in one auditorium and to have them keep good-natured while discussing the soundness or fallacy, the right or wrong of the views held by each other, because each is working for a single fundamental purpose, the cause of helping humanity. All are seeking to improve conditions that need improving, to secure social justice, to do good to their fellowmen and to rid American life of evil. The conference has earned recognition as one of the highly important institutions of America.

Helea Keller a Guest.
Another personality that was a constant magnet of attraction was Miss Helen Keller, who was an interested attractant was made to the standard and who had a small but notable part on the program. Miss Keller was attended by het teacher and friend. Mrs. Macy, and frequently mingled with the Giovanniti party. Miss Keller is an ardent Socialist. When not in the conference, these groups sought the most remote end of the broad see-front veranda of the Bradford Arms Hotel, where they had their headquarters.

One of the most beautiful scenes everenceted upon the Bradford Arms weranda was the introduction of Miss Keller to a basy of Dr. and Mrs. James P. Warbassa.

The Worker's Fair Share Mr. George W. Perkins spoke on 'The Worker's Fair Share.' He outlined the progress of mankind from owner and slave, magter and man, to employer and employe, and would go further to find 'the worker's fair share in partnership.' He emphasized his faith in co-operation against competition. His discussion left an impression with many in the confer-against competition. His discussion left in impression with many in the conference that he considered our industrial problems chiefly a question of profits. This was sharply challenged by the Sot cialists. But others commended all that he said most heartilly. He reiterated his belief that conditions in business, industry, and government are improving, but that much remains to be done. In the discussion he evaded questions asked by Mr. Glovannitti as to alleged had conditions in the steel mills and did not defend 100,000 aniaries, but declared that good progress in the right directions be heart of the competitions of the steel mills and did not defend 100,000 aniaries, but declared that good
